About CHEC

Centering Health Equity in Climate Action (CHEC) is a cross-sector, cross-industry initiative created to ensure health and health equity are core components of climate action.

Mission:

To promote health and health equity across all communities as core components of climate action.

To work in partnership across sectors to discern and amplify joint business action, address community health inequalities, improve community resilience, engage in public policy, and deploy a broad-based communication strategy to educate and promote action.

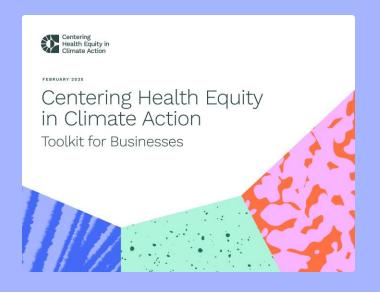

Audience Q&A

CHEC created a toolkit for businesses with step-by-step guidance for integrating health equity into business climate action

STEP ONE

Understand the business' climate and health equity impacts

STEP TWO

Start with the most impacted in your value chain

STEP THREE

Measure, manage, and monitor

STEP FOUR

Embed climate and health equity throughout your organization

BSR's Climate x Health Opportunities

In addition to single company consulting projects, BSR facilitates industry working groups and works with foundations to explore specific topics at the intersection of climate, nature & health. Companies should contact BSR if interested in joining or incubating such efforts.

Sector-wide Assessments

BSR conducts sectorwide assessments, e.g., climate/health impact assessments across company value chains.

Shared Principles and Standards

BSR works with companies to develop shared principles to address specific sustainability issues, e.g., principles for embedding health equity in climate action.

Industry-Specific & Emerging Issues

BSR hosts industry roundtables to explore the impacts of climate and health in industry-specific conversations, such as in healthcare, food, retail, and extractives, utilizing our foresight expertise and futures

methodologies

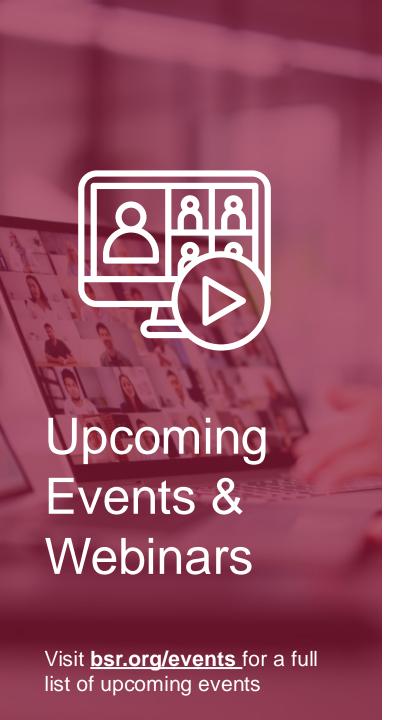

Grant Projects

BSR is improving health and health equity across communities in the face of climate change through joint business action, and community –based projects, and awareness building.
