About the Research

- The annual BSR/GlobeScan State of Sustainable Business Survey (now in its seventh year) provides insights into the world of sustainable business and aims to identify common perceptions and practices of corporate sustainability professionals. The 2015 survey offers unique insights on how companies are implementing sustainability goals, strengthening business resilience, and contributing to global development and climate change agendas. In addition to capturing the views of sustainability professionals, this year’s survey underscores how well sustainability is being incorporated into company practices and decision-making.

- This year, we benefit from the perspectives of more than 400 experienced professionals representing nearly 200 companies. Collectively, this is a highly informed group of corporate professionals on the leading edge of sustainable business. Their views provide deep insight into the current state of sustainable business and future opportunities and challenges in the landscape of business and society.
About the Research (2)

- Of 250 total BSR member companies, we had responses from key sustainability professionals in almost 200 companies, representing 77 percent of BSR member companies.
- In total, 440 sustainability professionals from 196 of today’s largest and most influential multinational companies provided their insights for this research.
- In an effort to identify adoption of specific sustainability practices by BSR member companies, this report examines responses on two levels: “All Respondents” and “Company-Level Respondents,” as outlined below.

Key Findings

- Companies today are experiencing greater integration of sustainability into the business, due in part to increased buy-in from leaders regarding the benefits of sustainability.

- Growing engagement from leadership means that corporate sustainability is increasingly driven by internal factors, rather than external events.

- Human rights remains a top priority, while climate change and improving access to basic needs are increasing important to business.

- Professionals outside of North America are more likely incorporate the upcoming international climate agreement into their business; however, there is global support for a universal commitment to decarbonization.

- A majority of BSR members perceive their companies consider inclusive growth a fairly high priority and feel it is driven by market opportunities.
Tracking Corporate Sustainability Priorities

This section shows how corporate sustainability priorities have fluctuated over the past five years.
Human rights remains the top priority for business, though climate change and access to products meeting basic needs are on the rise.

(Percentage of All respondents Identifying an Issue as a “Significant Priority”*)

*Percentage of respondents who selected a 4 or 5 on a 5-point scale where 1 is “Not at all a priority” and 5 is “A very significant priority.”

Q2. When you think about the focus of your company’s sustainability efforts in the next 12 months, how much of a priority are each of the following issues? (Please use a 5-point scale where 1 is “not at all a priority” and 5 is “a very significant priority.”)
These key issues will be addressed in the SDGs, which one out of three respondents feel their company will use to set goals.

Corporate Adoption of SDGs to Inform Target-Setting, 2015 (Percentage of Company-Level Respondents)

The SDGs were frequently mentioned as an important external development that will drive corporate sustainability efforts.

When asked directly whether their company intended to use the proposed SDGs to set corporate targets, professionals from almost one in three companies indicated that they probably would.

Q22. Assuming they are agreed upon in September, does your company intend to use the proposed UN Sustainable Development Goals to set corporate performance targets?
Views on the State of Sustainable Business

In our seventh year of research, we asked professionals from BSR members companies to share their views on the current state of sustainable business.
“The State of Sustainable Business is…”
